As a premier provider of flight support services for business aviation, Honeywell is focused on making your flight operations as effective as possible, through our comprehensive flight planning, cabin communications and database services. From flight routing, weather information and database updates to satellite communications, in-flight television news services, and data connectivity. With these technologies, we have the right mix of flight support solutions and subscription services to meet your unique operational requirements and aircraft needs.

Honeywell and Satcom Direct® now offer aircraft operators increased flexibility in choosing services to meet their specific business requirements. Operators can now purchase flight support and cabin communications services as a comprehensive package that saves time and the cost of managing multiple contracts and suppliers. In addition to a complete solution, aircraft operators are still able to purchase and utilize specific services separately from both Honeywell and Satcom Direct®.
